Rethinking economic borders: Is regionalism a promising path to address global challenges?

We are pleased to invite you to participate in the second edition of the Student Conference hosted by the Research Chair on New Challenges of Economic Globalization [NEME], in partnership with the Faculty of Law, Foreign Trade University in Hanoi [Vietnam]. This year, our conference will delve into the exciting theme of "Rethinking Economic Borders: Is Regionalism a Promising Path to Address Global Challenges?".

In an era where our world is increasingly interconnected, it is essential to question the existing economic borders and examine how regionalism can be a promising path to address global challenges. The rapid evolution of economic and trade relations among nations raises a multitude of questions that require deep reflection. This conference provides a unique opportunity to discuss and explore the various dimensions of this crucial issue.

For this second edition, the conference will take place in two locations: at Université Laval on May 15, 2024, and at the Foreign Trade University in Hanoi on May 30, 2024. Both events will also be accessible online, allowing participants from around the world to join.

We invite students from all academic levels, from all countries, in all disciplines related to the study of economic globalization [international law, political science, international relations, international economics, interdisciplinary international studies, business administration, history, geography, etc.] to submit their contributions.

We strongly encourage proposals that highlight case studies, comparative analyses, as well as innovative theoretical and methodological approaches. Presentations can be delivered in either French or English.

RESEARCH CHAIR ON NEW CHALLENGES OF ECONOMIC GLOBALIZATION (NEME)

The Research Chair on New Challenges of Economic Globalization [NEME] is a partnership chair created with the support of the Ministry of International Relations and La Francophonie and the Ministry of Economy, Innovation and Energy of Quebec.

The Chair's mission is to conduct legal and multidisciplinary research and organize scientific activities with the aim of promoting the dissemination of knowledge on trade agreements and government policies. Its approach is multidisciplinary, and its ongoing collaboration with other disciplines is essential to study issues such as multilateral and regional governance of trade, the redefinition of global value chains, the impact of new free trade on agricultural sectors, the new governance of digital commerce, state intervention in economic recovery or development, the reconciliation of trade and environmental concerns, the fight against climate change, cybercrime, and international taxation issues, among others.
